Hello JOSEPH IRWIN A. LAGURA,

How would you like to foster an organization with a culture of collaboration and commitment and where employees are engaged and empowered? According to studies conducted by the Ross School of Business of the University of Michigan, such an organization is possible through positive leadership.

Practicing Positive Leadership: The Importance Of Positive Leadership

Many people think effective leadership is defined by knowledge and skills, but the energy to drive performance is just as critical. This course helps learners gain an introspective approach to positive leadership and frameworks to become a more positive, effective leader.

During this course, learners will explore how to practice Positive Leadership and how the application of positive leadership principles can inspire new levels of employee engagement and accomplishment. Activities will introduce key principles, help learners assess their current capabilities, and let them explore positive leadership in action through relevant case studies. As they begin to understand the power of positive leadership, learners will share ideas about how to put it into practice to create a culture of positivity, engagement and empowerment.

Developed in Partnership with

Learners will:

- Understand the importance of positive leadership and its relationship to improved team and company performance
- Assess their own level of positive leadership and the extent to which their organization implements positive practices
- Identify and implement positive leadership practices
